

HIGH PROTECTION GETS A BIG BOOST FROM MR. HARDING

Republican Nominee Sends the Tariff Men a Message of Good Cheer.

WILL MAKE IT AN ISSUE.

Doesn't Expect Much Revenue but Will Urge It as Protective Measure.

By David Lawrence.
(Special Correspondent of The Evening World.)

MARION, O., Aug. 13 (Copyright, 1920).—Senator Harding has sent a message of good cheer to the believers in a protective tariff. He means to revive the tariff both as an issue in the campaign and as a defense for American industry. The occasion of his outburst of enthusiasm for the protective tariff was a communication from California telling of the plight of the lemon growers, but in reality the Republican candidate, who gave a scant paragraph to the subject in his speech of acceptance, has been waiting for a chance to tell old-line Republicans that the tariff is as close to his heart as any other political question.

Mr. Harding is a firm believer in the protective tariff. With great earnestness he told the correspondents here that he thought a new tariff law was inevitable and necessary. Of course no one pretends any more that there is much revenue to be gained out of a tariff law, for the most that ever was secured under the highest tariff measures was about $400,000,000 which used to be half America's budget, but nowadays, with an annual expense of $4,000,000,000, is relatively negligible. The income tax has taken its place as the great revenue producer.

SEEK THE TARIFF ONLY AS PROTECTIVE MEASURE.

Senator Harding, however, sees the tariff from quite another angle—namely protection of American industry. It may yield a small amount of revenue but at the same time he thinks tariff protection will help industries survive and keep payrolls intact.

The Republican candidate didn't go into detail. With the exception of wool, he didn't mention any other commodities or industries that would be favorably affected by a tariff revision. He did not discuss those industries which used to be in need of a protective tariff, but whose cost of production due to efficiency methods now is lower than that of foreign producers, nor did he say he would seek to let that the protective tariff wasn't used as a means of keeping price levels high.

The Senator simply made a blanket utterance covering the principle of a protective tariff and declined at this time to give any further specifications. Of course, in the midst of a campaign it would be unwise to mention specifically the industries that would be protected, for that would open up a subject that would be as tangled and as perplexing as the writing of a new tariff law itself.

But the principle of a protective tariff Mr. Harding has no hesitancy in proclaiming. The Democrats themselves have recognized that principle in urging a tariff on dyestuffs to protect our infant industry, started during the European war, from the influx of German products. The Democrats, however, have not committed themselves to any general tariff policy as yet.

POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF SENATOR HARDING'S STAND.

The position of Senator Harding's assertion of his belief in a protective tariff is significant. The Republican managers promised in 1918 that they would revise the tariff as soon as possible, and there were some Republican business men who thought that should have happened at the last session of Congress in which both

Mr. Harding as No. 235 West 128th. In the story of the arrest of Alvin Karpis, a negro porter, charged with shooting his wife and killing a neighbor, publishers in The Evening World Aug. 9, Powell's address and the scene of the shooting were given as No. 128 West 128th Street, which was an error. Investigation of the records at the 128th Street Police station show that the address was No. 218 West 128th Street. This correction is printed in justice to the residents of No. 218 West 128th Street.

"ANNA HELD JUNIOR" TELLS ALL THIEVES JEWELS ARE GONE

LIANE CARRERE

Anna Held's daughter, Liane Carrere, who calls herself also "Anna Held Junior," to-day served notice "by publication" to all burglars, second-story men and thieves generally that she no longer possesses any of her mother's jewelry, that she has nothing worth stealing and that she wants the light-fingered gentry to let her alone. Twice since her mother's death she has been robbed, and she said to-day she had not only disposed of the last of Anna Held's jewels, but that she intended also to give up her apartment at No. 325 Seventh Avenue, the scene of the burglaries.

"Now I have nothing left and I'm going to the Anna Held Junior Farm, near Foughkeepsie, and attend to my pigs and chickens. Burglars cannot annoy me any more."

COX IS PREPARING TWO NEW SPEECHES

Both Will Be Delivered Tomorrow at Wheeling, and Will Outline Policies.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 12.—Gov. Cox returned to-day from Camp Perry, Ohio, and planned to spend most of the day on the two addresses he will deliver to-morrow at Wheeling, W. Va.—an afternoon speech at the Democratic State convention and a public address in the evening.

National policies and politics also, the Governor intimated to-day, will be the themes of to-morrow's addresses. His Camp Perry address yesterday generally was non-political and was featured by a declaration for world peace by arbitration without resort to war, if possible, with honor.

Clotheslines Save Baby's Life. Two clotheslines which served to check a fall are believed to have saved the life of Frances Porretta, seven, of No. 432 East 11th Street. The child was playing on the roof this morning and, venturing too close to the edge, lost her balance. The building is four stories high, but she landed on a one-story building below. She clutched the clotheslines and dragged them down with her.

Unidentified Man Leaps off Ferryboat.

Police of the Harbor Squad to-day searched for the body of an unidentified man who was reported to have jumped off the Jersey Central ferryboat at Jersey City in mid-afternoon yesterday. Harry Rawson, of No. 563 Third Avenue, said the man, apparently was about twenty-five, five feet five inches tall, weighed 160 and wore a brown cap.

Houses were controlled by the Republicans. But the leaders in Congress thought otherwise. They really feared it would be useless to attempt any revision of the tariff with world trade conditions changing from day to day with developments in Europe.

To the high tariff men the Republicans also pointed out the uselessness of tariff revision from another viewpoint—namely the certainty that a Democratic Executive would veto any tariff legislation that a Republican Congress might send to the White House.

Now, however, with the prospect of a Republican Administration in all branches of the Government, the Republican candidate for the Presidency is opportunely reiterating his faith in a protective tariff. All the obstacles that lie in that course have been fully discounted. It is realized that all the desires of those captains of industry who want a high tariff for their own advantage cannot be granted and that there is some danger of exciting hopes which can never be satisfied.

So the discussion will for the present be confined to the principle of a protective tariff, which Senator Harding deems a fitting companion policy to his theory of America first in all international relations.

FLYERS FIND BODY OF WOMAN AT SEA; HOPE LOST FOR BOY

Squall Overtook Miss Alice Wing and Child in Rowboat.

Volunteer aviators in seaplanes, having found the body of Miss Alice Wing, continued their search to-day over Mevox Bay, near Southampton, L. I., for the body of Philip Russell Jr., the twelve-year-old boy who went rowing with her Wednesday morning.

Hope that the boy is alive has been abandoned. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Russell of New York, and Miss Wing, who was thirty, was a sister of the senior member of the law firm of Wing & Russell, No. 14 Wall Street.

Wednesday afternoon an air was found in the inlet. Late yesterday the empty boat was picked up near the Bridgehampton Coast Guard Station. It was then feared both the boy and the young woman had lost their lives. There was a heavy squall along the coast Wednesday afternoon.

Late yesterday, while scores of motorboats, sailboats and other craft were searching, the body of Miss Wing was found floating several miles off shore by the aviators.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell have been spending the summer in the Jonah Rogers cottage in Water Mill on the Flying Point Road, and the two were in the Rogers rowboat when they went out for their row.

Mr. Russell, who is a partner in Wing & Russell, and makes his winter home at Paradise, N. Y., rushed to Water Mill Wednesday night and assisted the searching parties.

Auto-Ambulance Crash Ties Up Traffic.

A Greenpoint Hospital ambulance and an automobile operated by John Frederick, merchant, of No. 175 India Street, Brooklyn, collided at Manhattan and Norman Avenues, Brooklyn, early today. Dr. George, surgeon, was thrown to the street, but unhurt. Frederick lost control of his car after the collision and it knocked down a H. K. T. trolley pole. Traffic on the Green and Flushing Avenue cars was held up forty minutes.
